CONSUMER EDUCATION: INFORMATION ABOUT PROVIDER MONITORING AND OVERSIGHT

The Office of Child Care (OCC), Administration for Children and Families (ACF), U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is committed to helping parents make the best child care choices for their families. The reauthorization of the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act (CCDBG Act of 2014)\(^1\) provides an opportunity for States to share information that can help parents or guardians make informed choices when selecting care for their child. One of the best resources is a child care provider's monitoring history and an understanding of the requirements and processes that help protect children in care.

This is one of a series of four issue briefs that address CCDBG Act of 2014 requirements and provide state examples and links to state Web sites that can serve as examples for States and Territories in enhancing their own consumer education efforts.\(^2\) These briefs were developed based on several regional webinars and meetings that focused on consumer education.

The information in this issue brief is organized into three main sections:

- An overview of the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 2014 (CCDBG Act of 2014) requirements specific to consumer education and how States share provider-specific information; aggregate information about deaths, serious injuries, and abuse; and information about State licensing processes;
- Information about how States are currently sharing licensing and monitoring data; and
- Other related resources.

Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 2014 Requirements

According to the CCDF Reauthorization Frequently Asked Questions\(^3\), the law requires that States make the results of monitoring and inspection reports available by "electronic means." "Electronic means" refers to "a consumer-friendly and easily accessible website. A website with easy-to-understand, basic information about how child care is regulated and monitored, as well as the results of monitoring and inspections for individual child care providers, can improve transparency for families. In order for a website to be a useful tool for parents, it should be free, easy to navigate, searchable and in plain language.”

\(^2\) These issue briefs were originally produced by the National Center on Child Care Quality Improvement, a previous contract of the Office of Child Care. The National Center on Early Childhood Quality Assurance is disseminating the issue briefs. These briefs and other resources about consumer education can be found on the Child Care Technical Assistance Network Web site at https://childcareta.acf.hhs.gov/.

States must post the following information about licensed and license-exempt providers:

- Provider-specific information that includes:
  - Results of monitoring and inspection reports including those with substantiated complaints;
  - Last date of inspection; and
  - Information about corrective action plans if applicable.

- Aggregate information about child care in the State that includes:
  - The annual number of deaths;
  - The annual number of serious injuries; and
  - The annual number of incidences of substantiated child abuse.

- Information about State processes that includes:
  - The process for licensing child care providers;
  - The process for conducting background checks and the offenses that would keep a provider from being allowed to care for children; and
  - The process for conducting monitoring and inspections of child care providers.

In addition to the required components, ACF strongly encourages States to post other consumer education information on this Web site, including provider-specific information about the quality of care available to parents.

State Information and Examples

Access to information about a provider’s license or registration status and the findings of an onsite monitoring visit can provide critical information about the safety and quality of child care. Some States post full licensing inspection reports, while others post only information about rule violations, complaints, and enforcement actions. Many Web sites include statements disclaiming responsibility or liability for use of the information or for any data inaccuracies.

In the 2014 National Association for Regulatory Administration (NARA) Child Care Licensing Programs and Policies Survey, State licensing agencies were asked a series of questions about how inspection reports, licensing complaints, and enforcement actions are posted.

- Thirty-four States post inspection reports online.
  - Sixteen States post the full inspection report.
  - Eighteen States post a summary report.
- Twenty-nine States post complaints.
  - Nine States post all complaints.
  - Twenty States post only substantiated complaints.

4 CCDBG Act of 2014 658(c)(2)(D).
5 CCDBG Act of 2014 658(c)(2)(E)(i)(III)
- Twenty-one States post enforcement actions.
- Nineteen States allow the provider to review information before it is posted.\(^6\)

State Examples: Online Information about Provider Monitoring and Oversight

States’ online licensing reports vary in both the information provided and the types of providers included in the search function. The table below includes a brief description of several States’ online inspection reports, including the fields contained within the search function, providers included in the search, corrective action, inspection dates, information about licensing and enforcement processes, and other notable features.

License-Exempt Providers

EXEMPT PROVIDERS INCLUDED IN CHILD CARE SEARCH

While some States include license-exempt child care providers in the provider search function, most limit the information provided. As detailed in the following table, both Missouri and Virginia provide more extensive information about license-exempt providers than most States.

BACKGROUND CHECK INFORMATION ABOUT LICENSE-EXEMPT PROVIDERS

In response to serious injuries that occurred in license-exempt child care, both California and New Mexico established a registry of license-exempt child care providers who have had their backgrounds checked.

California

TrustLine

TrustLine is a registry of in-home and license-exempt child care providers in California who have had their background checked. In addition to a comprehensive background check, the licensing records are cross-referenced continually. More information is available at http://trustline.org/
New Mexico

Mario's Search

New Mexico established a database of Registered Child Care providers who have obtained a background check under the relevant background check regulations. Parents can also access additional resources including the New Mexico Judiciary Database, and the Bernalillo County Metropolitan Court and Sex Offender Registries. Additional information is available at https://www.newmexickids.org/content/parents_and_families/childcare_search/marios_story/.

  This is the ACF response to frequently asked questions about the CCDBG Act of 2014, organized by key implementation objectives.

  In a series of reports about contemporary issues in licensing, this report focuses on practices and policies pertaining to serious injuries and fatalities in child care. State examples illustrate challenges in this area but also emphasize that, when done well, the tracking of incidents helps States focus their efforts on reducing the number of children who are seriously injured or die in child care settings.

  This report focuses on States’ inspection policies and practices—guidelines and rules for monitoring providers’ compliance with the law and the regulations. Topics include authorization for inspections, frequency and type of inspection (announced or unannounced), use of technology to aid in the inspection process, and public access to inspection and enforcement actions.

  This issue brief provides an overview of nine ways that State child care licensing programs are increasing their use of technology, including the use of data for caseload management and supervisory oversight, automation to support risk management and consistency in enforcement actions, linkages with other systems, and online information for consumers and providers. For each approach, state examples are provided to illustrate new and innovative practices.

  The purpose of this paper is to assist state licensing and CCDF administrators in assessing and enhancing the information they provide to families on the internet. It provides details about some of the States that post licensing information about child care providers on the internet for parents to search.
