Plenary 3: Building a Visual Representation

Adapted from: Pillsbury, J. Results Based Facilitation: Moving From Talk to Action. Book Two. Sherbrooke Consulting, Inc., 2013, p. 94-95.

Step 1: Identify who is going to be at the Center of your work. What result do you want to achieve for them?

- ◆ This can be either a result for an entire tribal population or for your tribal agency or organization.

Step 2: Identify the partners that might contribute to your result.

- ◆ Think about partners that interact directly with children and families in your program or tribal community, as well as partners that work on a tribal, regional or national level.
- ◆ Feel free to add sectors that may not be included in the graphic.

Step 3: Identify the potential contributions each partner might make.

- ◆ Keep in mind we are just brainstorming and partners would identify their own contributions.

Step 4: Identify how you will measure the progress you are making.

- ◆ Remember the three key questions: How much will we do? How will we do it? What difference will it make?
- ◆ Consider the data that you are already collecting and reporting to the Office of Child Care.
